Staff Specialist, Media Relations, Communications GC

Job description

The role is within the media relations team of GC communications. It involves providing support for media relations initiatives aimed at promoting Infineon's brand, products, and services to media outlets, influencers, and stakeholders in the GC region. This role requires strong relationship-building skills, excellent communication abilities, and a deep understanding of the media landscape. Additionally, it will involve close collaboration with cross-division teams to execute or support comprehensive media projects that enhance local brand influence and contribute to local business growth.

In your new role you will:

Content & media materials

- Collaborate with marketing and communications teams to develop and implement tailored messages and content that support local business growth across diverse media platforms, while also crafting local press releases to maximize media coverage and conducting research on competitors.
- Customize and adapt corporate materials, including company profiles, corporate brochures, and corporate decks, to align with local requirements and preferences.
- Create engaging and captivating story ideas to pitch to reporters and journalists with aim of garnering media interest for the organization development. Develop media kits and other materials for engaging with local media outlets.
- Provide assistance in external leadership communication, including arranging executive interviews, preparing speeches, Q&A sessions, and backgrounders.

Media events

- Proactively plan, execute, and support media relations programs for the company/business products and services, including new product launch, trade fair/campaign, announcements, etc.
- Support major corporate initiatives, through innovative and effective communications that address the needs of different stakeholders.
- Support other media relation and other communication initiative if needed.
